

When every min counts, OceanNet brings shore closer to fishermen

OceanNet lets use of smartphones in sea through shore-based Wi-Fi connectivity

TINISHA RACHEL SAMUEL @Kollam

FOR fishermen battling rough seas, the difference between making it home and never returning can sometimes come down to a few minutes. It is to bridge that crucial gap that Amrita Vishwa Vidyapeetham has developed OceanNet, a technology that keeps fishing boats connected to the shore while providing real-time weather, navigation and distress alerts.

Unlike conventional communication systems that require specialised handsets, OceanNet allows fishermen to use their regular smartphones.

Radio waves from shore-based base stations provide Wi-Fi connectivity to special receiver units installed on boats, enabling access to services such as WhatsApp, email and Skype even while at sea.

Developed jointly by the Ministry of Electronics and Information Technology (MeitY) under its ITRA initiative and Amrita Vishwa Vidyapeetham, the system is designed as a comprehensive safety network for fishermen.

Through dedicated mobile applications, fishermen can re-

The antennas developed and deployed by Amrita Vishwa Vidyapeetham on the fishing boat and at the shore (R) where their base station is kept ceive real-time warnings on changing weather conditions, distress situations and maritime boundary crossings. Information on wind speed, wave height and weather forecasts can also be accessed directly from the boat. Satellite data identifying potential fishing zones can be transmitted to fishermen, helping them plan their movements at sea.

The technology also aims to shorten the response time during emergencies.

Location-tagged distress alerts can be sent to coastal police and rescue centres, allowing authorities to identify the boat and initiate assistance.

Adding an artificial intelligence layer to the system, OceanNet can warn fishermen if their boat is heading towards a storm-affected area. It can also detect engine failures, drifting or deviation from the intended route and alert the coast guard.

With communication, weather monitoring, navigation and emergency response brought together on one platform, OceanNet aims to turn the sea from a communication dead zone into a connected safety zone for fishermen. "We began working on it in 2010-11 when a few boats capsized in Kollam, and seven died. With funding from the University and the Ministry of Electronics and IT, we developed a pilot project and worked for a year. This was developed to help the fishermen with crucial information and to inform the family in case of distress.

And many unknowingly cross the border; ship collisions also happen, so it is important for such information to reach the fishermen," said Dr Manisha Vinodini Ramesh, pro-vice-chancellor of Amrita Viswa Vidyapeetham.

Man pushes mother before moving train at Manavur, held

RAJALAKSHMI SAMPATH @ Chennai

FRUSTRATED by his inability to care for his 71-year-old, wheelchair-bound disabled mother, a 44-year-old man pushed her onto the railway tracks in front of an approaching express train at Manavur railway station in Tiruvallur district on Tuesday night, killing her on the spot.

The victim, S Padmavathi, was run over by the Yelagiri Express, which doesn't have a stoppage at the station, and her dismembered body and the wheelchair were later spotted on the tracks by passengers, sources said. The accused, S Parthasarathy, was arrested for murder by the Arakkonam Government Railway Police on Wednesday and remanded in judicial custody.

Padmavathi had been suffering from neurofibromatosis, a condition that causes lumps to develop in the body. Her husband, a former central government employee, died in 2007, after which she received a monthly family pension of around ₹15,000.

Parthasarathy, the youngest of her three sons, was taking care of her and his unmarried, disabled elder brother at their house near Selva Vinayagam Street in Manavur. Police said Parthasarathy, who worked as a contract employee at the Heavy Vehicles Factory in Avadi and earned around ₹12,000 a month, was also facing financial difficulties.

A life scripted in golden era of Malayalam cinema

EXPRESS NEWS SERVICE @Kochi

VETERAN Malayalam film producer and distributor N G John, 90, popularly known as Geo Kuttappan, passed away in Kochi on Wednesday. He suffered a heart attack while his family was preparing to celebrate his 90th birthday.

John was among the prominent figures associated with the formative years and golden period of Malayalam cinema. The son of N X George, one of the early distributors in the industry, he entered the film business when Malayalam cinema was still largely centred in Madras.

He witnessed and contributed to the industry's transition from its early years to the establishment of a more organised production and distribution system in Kerala.

He produced several films under the banner of Geo Movie Productions, with a significant part of his filmography comprising collaborations with director I V Sasi and screenwriter T Damodaran.

His productions with the duo included 'Iniyyum Puzhayozhukum,' 'Ezhamakadalinnakkare,' 'Meen,' 'Innalenkil Nale,' 'Ee Nadu,' 'Iniyeenkilum' and 'Ithrayum Kaalam.'

Among his other notable productions were J Sasikumar's 'Mini Mol,' M Krishnan Nair's 'Rajaneegandhi,' Bhadrans 'Aattuvanchi Ulanjappol' and Mani Ratnam's only Malayalam film 'Unaroo,' headlined by Mohanlal and Sukumaran.

John was also an important figure in the film trade and industry bodies during the period. He was associated with the South Indian Film Chamber of Commerce from its early years and served as president of the Kerala Film Chamber for six years.

His production 'Ee Nadu,' starring Mammooty and Rathesh, was among the significant political films of the period.

The film ran for 125 days and won the Kerala State Award for Best Popular Film. Its impact extended beyond Malayalam cinema, with remakes made in Tamil, Telugu and Hindi. When actor Kamal Haasan listed the 60 films that had influenced his career on turning 60, 'Ee Nadu' featured among them.

John documented his long association with Malayalam cinema in his 2012 book Cinemayum Njanum - 70 Varshangal, published by DC Books.

The memoir traces his seven decades in film production and distribution, covering the transition from silent cinema to talkies and the eventual shift of Malayalam cinema's centre from Madras to Kerala.

The funeral will be held at Mary Queen's Church Cemetery, Edappally, on Thursday. The FEPCA Directors' Union expressed condolences on his death.

KSRTC to operate more services for Onam

T'Puram: In view of the possible rush during Onam, the KSRTC will operate additional inter-state and tourist services. Taking into consideration possible increase in passengers from August 21 to 25 and August 29 to September 3, more services will be conducted. Inter-state services will be operated to Bengaluru and Chennai and back. In addition, additional services will be conducted to tourist destinations within the state, through the budget tourism cell based on passenger demand. Maximum services will be operated during holidays, except on Thiruvonam day.

Kerala Cricket League 3rd season to begin today

T'Puram: Bringing on the cricket frenzy to the state during the Onam season, the third season of Kerala Cricket League (KCL) will begin on Thursday. The 17-day-long tournament, fully hosted at the Greenfield International Stadium at Kariavattom here, will have its finals on September 5.
